The Main Menu Map is the first thing that appears after starting and loading IFs. It shows a world map with easy access to a range of information related to the countries covered by IFs. The map is color coded to show how different countries compare to each other in a chosen variables (which is the Human Development Index by default). Once another variable is explored in one of the other display options in IFs, this most recently explored variable will then be shown when returning to the Main Menu Map. The left hand corner of the map has a legend which shows the current variable being displayed and its color coding. Zoom in or out in the map by clicking on the plus or minus signs at the right of map.

Example of the Main Menu Popup once a country on the Main Menu map is clicked.
